FBI fugitive list radically changed

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The FBI seems to have met its match in the new breed of radical leftists who have dominated its 10 "most wanted" list of fugitives for the past year.

The list was expanded to 15 last year in an attempt to speed the capture of "radical terrorists," like H. Rap Brown, who disappeared on his way to stand trial in Maryland on charges of inciting to riot and arson. He made the list May 6, 1970, and is still on it.

The only most-wanted fugitive of this type to be caught is black militant Angela Davis, now awaiting trial on a murder charge in connection with an Aug. 7, 1970, courtroom shootout in San Rafael, Calif. She made the list Aug. 18, 1970, and was captured in New York City the following Oct. 13.

The only fugitive on the list to be captured since is Warren David Reddock, 45, a paroled forger charged with killing a business associate in Chicago. He was apprehended April 15.

Still at large are nine of the men and women the FBI calls "radical" or "revolutionary" and six old-style criminals.

The first of the new breed to make the list—once regarded as a sign of reaching the "big time" in the gangster world, was Cameron David Bishop, 29, of Pueblo, Colo., on April 15, 1969.

The FBI said Bishop was "a violence-minded college revolutionary" wanted on a charge of sabotage in the dynamiting of Colorado power transmission towers which serve defense plants.

FLED THERE

At the time, the FBI said Bishop "has reportedly voiced a desire to live in Cuba." He may well have fled there. Others on the list may have gone to Mexico or Canada or even crossed the Atlantic to Europe or Algiers, a favorite hideout for Black Panther Party members.

The Top 10 list was created in 1950 by the FBI at the suggestion of the old International News Service (INS). By giving maximum publicity to wanted fugitives, the list was so successful for the first 20 years that there were frequent vacancies between the time a fugitive was caught and another took his place on the list.

There were always a few—like John W. Clouser, a Florida mental hospital escapee—who eluded capture years. Clouser, 39, went on the list Jan. 7, 1965, and still at large.

After Bishop and Brown were added, the FBI expanded the list to 10 on Sept. 4, 1970, to include four young men wanted in the bombing of a University of Wisconsin building in which a research worker was killed Aug. 1, 1970. The four, Karleth Lewis Armstrong, 25, his brother, Dwight, 20, L. Frederick Burt, 33, and David Sylvan Fine, 19, are still at large.

Bernardine Rae Dohrn, 34, became only the fifth woman ever to make the list when she was added Oct. 14, 1970. The FBI called her "a self-described revolutionary Communist and reputed underground leader of the violence-oriented Weatherman faction of the Students for a Democratic Society."

DAYS OF RAGE

She is wanted for her part in the 1970 "Days of Rage" demonstrations in Chicago on charges of unlawful interstate flight to avoid prosecution in mob action, violation of federal antiriot laws and conspiracy.

Two more young women were the last to go on the list a few days later. They are Susan Edith Saxe, and Katherine Ann Power, both 24 "reputed members of a radical, revolutionary group dedicated to attacking the U.S. military system and undermining police powers," according to the FBI.

They are wanted in the slaying of a Boston police officer following a bank robbery Sept. 23, 1970, in which $26,585 was seized from the State Street Bank and Trust Co.

Others on the Most Wanted list since 1968 or 1969 are Benjamin Hoskins Paddock, 44, a convicted bank robber and prison escapee; Martin Dean Arrington, 30, who broke out of a Florida prison where she was under a life sentence for murder; Byron James Rice, 35, wanted for killing an armored car guard during a robbery in Mountain View, Calif.; Taylor Morris Teaford, 36, wanted for killing his grandmother and shooting his sister; and Charles L. Herron, 34, one of five men sought for allegedly killing a policeman in Nashville, Tenn.
